The power of being
UNCOMFORTABLE

The key to healthy relationships

The health of our relationships is in proportion to the amount of self-denial that we practice. The more we deny our wants and our desires for what God wants, the more our relationships work according to His design. The problem is that denying ourselves the things we think we need can be very uncomfortable at times. We are starting a new sermon series called, "The power of being UNCOMFORTABLE."

The acquiring of the qualities that produce real life and that make us better at relationships can also make us uncomfortable. Sacrifice is costly, but it's what God uses to help us make others better. In this series we will look at the UNCOMFORTABLE cross, the UNCOMFORTABLE commandment, and the UNCOMFORTABLE call. The more we are willing to live with what's uncomfortable to our flesh but is in the will of God we will find true happiness and power for our lives. We will see that living in the power of being uncomfortable is truly the key to healthy and godly relationships.

All basketball campers will be honored during our 10:30 celebration, and special achievement awards will be given. There will be a picnic for everyone immediately following. Kona Ice will be for sale, too!
